

Possible Bigfoot Burial Ground/Cave? Photos of Bigfoot Cradling Dying Mate.

Amazing and Exciting New Things Happening In Bigfoot Research

REDWOOD CITY, CA, UNITED STATES, October 25, 2016

The expedition started in California this winter, the team was full of excitement for the upcoming journey. The team made their way North through California to meet with the wife of the legendary tracker Ivan Marx, Peggy Marx. Pulling on her property in the early afternoon the team noticed all her beautiful animals and the incredible view of the land from her front porch. Once she came out, her and Tom Sr. sat down on the swing and got to talking. They reminisced about the times when Peggy's late husband Ivan, one of the most renowned tracker and Bigfoot hunter of his time would take Tom out to the woods and teach him to track and hunt. How they would hunt bear, trap mountain lions, and of course their encounters with the creatures. When it was time to leave Peggy made the most generous donation of the original "Ivan Marx Bear & Cougar Guide Service" sign from the days that they were in business. The sign will be going up in the Ivan and Peggy Marx exhibit section of the new museum being built in Montana.

Maynard Kicking Woman and Bruce Schildt joined Tom Biscardi of Searching for Bigfoot and East Glacier Park hotel and restaurant owner Bill Stewart at a celebration dinner at the Alpenglow. Biscardi and Stewart are teaming up to create a new upscale hotel with a Bigfoot Museum Exhibit and live entertainment theater encompassing an entire floor of the hotel.

On our way to Montana, we got a call from Northern Oregon. The witness claimed to have some activity going on around his property and wanted us to come check it out. The witness claimed to have been hearing wood knocks in the middle of the night, and had found some footprints around the property. The team started at nine p.m., with thermal imagers and night vision, scanning the area and making wood knocks and howls, using several different tones and levels. Upon returning a loud crash and commotion was heard. The team looked and saw something dash out of sight to the other side of the neighboring yard. The team pursued the creature spreading out and scanning the entire area. Unfortunately no more signs of the creature were found. The team spent several more hours searching before they packed up and set off to meet the deadline in Montana. But the very next day, the witness called back with incredible news! After setting out bait he had woke up to find it missing, with several clear tracks in the area! He measured them and sent pictures.

At the next location the Searching For Bigfoot expedition team interviewed local tribal members in the North West Mountains regarding recent sightings. Many of the witnesses have not previously shared their stories with the public at large due to fear of ridicule and scorn from unbelievers.

The week of investigating was tough with 80-100 mph winds, heavy rain and wild stories and evidences. One of the most exciting bits of evidence gathered was a photo of a Bigfoot creature weeping over the body of its dying mate. The creature had been shot by a local native. The photo was taken when the shooter witnessed another creature approach, embrace and hold the other creature. The witness said that the creature let out a howl that made his hair stand up on end and shook him to his core.

Further stories that have been gathered in our search have been stories of a burial ground located deep in the mountains. Upon hearing the story the team set out on foot and difficult horseback explorations to see if they could locate the caves hidden deep in the mountains. Unfortunately, the search had to be ended due to bad weather so the team left the search and hit the road for a forty-two hour drive to the next planned investigation.

The stories for the next location included the death of a young colt with the corpse found lying against a stump at the rear of the property it appeared to have a broken neck. About one week before our investigation our host had been out on the property for several hours. At around seven thirty or eight o'clock, the wife went out to find him, armed with nothing but her flashlight. She went to the middle of the property near his cabin, and called out to him. There was no reply, but she heard knocks on wood, and footsteps and movements through the brush. She turned her flashlight towards the sounds, and was shocked by what she saw, a large, lumbering, black mass. It's height roughly seven and a half feet, with great shoulders thick and wide. It was walking away from her, thankfully, back across the tree line and into the forest. It was moments later that her husband, our host came calling, and walking back to her at the center of the property. The wife was extremely shook up and has never felt the same about being on her property at night.

Searching For Bigfoot, Inc. expedition teams will be performing regular hunts and offering a select few the chance to accompany the team. This will be a pilot project for future hotel/museum projects to be located on various tribal lands across the nation. This project has allowed the companies to establish a protocol of working together with various tribal governments.
